

Art explores Nevada legacy of labor

End of the trail mural at California Trail Interpretive Center unveiled

By Thomas Valencia, CTC-Park Ranger

As visitors make their way through the end of the engaging exhibits at the California Trail Interpretive Center (CTIC), they'll witness a new mural depicting Chinese laborers constructing a railroad through a Northern Nevada landscape. The mural was completed by Hattie Studios, a Los Angeles based organization led by Jessica Hattie.

Previously, this end section of the exhibits at the CTIC lacked a satisfying conclusion to the story of the California Trail. The era of emigrants traveling along the California Trail ran from 1841-1869, with its "West" resulting from the completion of the Transcontinental Railroad.
